News story #1 Fewer rigs, fewer jobs in the oil industry

Setting the Scene

Sue Ogrocki/Associated Press) (CBC File photo)

The province of Alberta is well-known for the oil sands and its oil drilling industry. Oil and gas make up a large part of Alberta's economy, and Canada's economy too. Nowadays, several factors are causing this industry to slow down. This is hurting the economy.

Pre-Listening Questions

What do we use oil for?

Why is this decline an important issue?

What will happen if the oil industry continues to slow down?

Vocabulary

Transcripts of Weekly news stories

	SEPTBEMBER 9 TH WEEKLY NEWS STORIES	TIME
Introduction	Hi, I'm Shannon Scott and you are listening to Learning English with CBC for Friday September 9th.	0:00
Story 1	It's not shaping up to be a good year for the oil industry. The Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors is saying 20-16 could be the worst year for the industry since the 1970s. The Association says the number of oil wells drilled in total will drop by about 25 percent. And there will be 31 percent fewer rigs running this year. Fewer wells drilled and running, which means there are fewer jobs as well. The number of people working in the industry is down 69 per cent from two years ago. That means nearly 35 thousand people have lost their jobs. The President of the Association, Mark Scholz, says there are three reasons for the decline. These are: new carbon taxes, a high corporate tax rate in Alberta, and delays on pipeline projects. He says these factors all combine to make Canada unattractive to investors.	0:08
Story 2	A federal court judge is under review for comments he made during a sexual assault trial. Justice Robin Camp made the comments in 2014 when he was a provincial court judge. Throughout the trial, Camp asked the alleged victim questions, such as why she had not fought back harder against her alleged attacker, and why she didn't keep her knees shut. There were complaints about Camp's comments from two law professors at the University of Calgary and Dalhousie University in Halifax. These complaints led to a judicial review, which is very rare. A panel made up of three judges and two senior lawyers are hearing testimony about what happened. They will be responsible for deciding if Camp can continue to be a judge based on what he said during that trial. Camp has agreed his comments were insensitive, rude, and ignorant. He has received counselling from a clinical psychologist and a legal professor. The complainant spoke on the first day of the inquiry and said the judge's comments made her hate herself.	1:09
Story 3	The 15th Paralympic games have begun in Rio. More than 160 Canadian athletes with disabilities are in Brazil for the games. When Team Canada entered the stadium during the opening ceremonies, the Canadian flag was carried by David Eng. Eng is the co-captain of the wheelchair basketball team. This will be his fourth Paralympic games.	2:16

	He helped Canada win gold medals in 2004 and 2012, as well as silver in 2008. Eng says being asked to carry the flag is the highest honour he could ever receive. This year, more than 4 thousand athletes from more than 160 countries will compete in 22 different sports, including archery, para-cycling, sitting volleyball, wheelchair rugby and wheelchair tennis. And this year for the first time para-canoe and para-triathlon will be included in the Games. Canadian athletes will compete in 19 different events. <td></td>
